Jimmy Dore Attempts Faux Red-Brown Alliance

While it is true that there are aspects of the left and of Islam that are anti-liberal, indeed views that I even have, nonetheless it is a mistake to believe that common cause between White Supremacists, Muslims and leftists will ever be possible. All these groups hate each other and for good reason. Just because they may agree on the problem of globalization, corporations, anti-Americanism and perhaps even jewish influence, doesn't mean they all want the same goal. Jimmy Dore, a leftist YouTube who used to work for the Young Turks, has been in a battle with the corporate Democrats over various economic proposals like Medicare for All that none of them seem interested in fighting for. Now, the real problem is that the left can't actually exist with capitalism, the dirty little secret they won't tell you. Nothing about leftist is grassroots, and there is certainly nothing inherently leftist about removing the profit motive from war, banks, healthcare, the environment or education. In fact, the Nazis favored some of these proposals. Dore recently interviewed a member of the far-left Boogaloo Bois, who've been wrongly labeled far-right by the mainstream media, intent on associating any and all violence with the right.

> Radicalized Michigan Anarchist Seeks Unity With The Left.

Anarchism has never been a right-wing ideology, no matter how many times Dinesh D'Souza whines about it on twitter. Anti-government sentiment has always been a leftist thing, which just makes the limited government people out to be center-leftists, which of course they are. Even most AnCaps are more leftist than rightist. But if the Boogaloo Bois really do believe all these things that Dore says they do, they not only do they have a lot in common with the left, they have everything in common with the left. What Dore is attempting is an old game called the Red-Brown alliance, in which the far-left, far-right and Muslims come together for common cause against the evil, liberal West. As a member of what could be termed the far-right myself, I have no interest in getting together with leftists, Muslims, conservatives or gays. These people make me sick. They are my enemies and seek to stamp the global order in their image, an image I found repulsive. This won't work, and even corporate pro-war stooges like Ana Kasparian have caught on that this is a giant grift. Always remember that dirty little leftist secret: they can appear grassroots all they want, but in the end, the left can't exist with Big Finance fueling their evil.
